

Outlook

The matters presented above sketch out the basic knowledge. More profound knowledge and abilities gained in actual practice are of great importance for processing international projects. Naturally, neither of these can be illustrated or explained in a primer of this type.

More detailed information is provided in the Project Management Manual.

Project managers can gain appropriate experience only through practical work.

How our company performs in competition (i.e. applies its knowledge in its daily activities), in order to take on the challenges of the market, must be left to the future

Global competition will confront us all with challenges which will require us to be well equipped.

If we manage to find the path to a self-improving organization and follow that path effectively, we will be one step further on the way to success.

But an important part of that is also to pass on the experiences we make. And that is what we are doing herewith.

The only thing that we can change and consciously influence as individuals is our own future. Every one of us, you and I - but we have to do it, otherwise nothing will change.
